IT MIGHT BE FAR REACHING.

The contractor who is building a new dam for the Stamford Water Co. near North Stamford, has been using a steam traction engine and cars, weighing 30 to 35 tons, for the hauling of cement thereto. As this damaged the roads and was considered a danger to other vehicular traffic, the town made complaint and, as the engine ran partly over a State road, action was brought in the name of the State. Judge G. W. Wheeler heard the case and granted a temporary injunction "against the further use of said engine and cars or trailers attached thereto upon the State road so-called"; he also stated that, if proper action were brought by town or city a similar decision as to other highways than the State road would be given.

That part of Judge Wheeler's decision which was of general interest, is as follows:

"The evidence tends to prove that the use of the traction engine and trailers by this defendant upon the highways of the town and city of Stamford, constitute a nuisance, render these highways unsafe for travel, and damage them very considerably. And this could not be otherwise, with engines and cars of such great weight, 30 to 35 tons, with wheels constituted as these are, pounding along the highways, propelled by steam and belching forth smoke and sparks. The highways of our towns and cities are not designed for such use, and none are constructed strong enough to continually withstand it; and unless horses are to be kept from the highways entirely, such an engine cannot be used thereon with safety to travelers.

Although Judge Wheeler specifies the machine the use of which is enjoined, any machine which can be used to "constitute a nuisance, render them (the roads) unsafe for travel and damage them (the roads) very considerably," may come under the condemnation of the law as interpreted in this decision. It is a question whether racing automobiles, or machines driven at or approximating racing speed, and whether their motive power be gasoline or steam engines, do not come under the court's interpretation of the law. The ejection of smoke and sparks is not the only feature of a machine which renders highways "unsafe for travel and damages them very considerably."

Probably, Judge Wheeler's decision was not intended to affect the use of ordinary automobiles, and yet its reasoning might be stretched to reach them.

Prohibition in Connecticut evidently reached its zenith last year for despite the heavy expenditure of time, labor and money by its advocates this year to hold the ground previously gained and to add thereto, "license" scored a net gain of four towns. The voters of the cities, boroughs and larger towns have undoubtedly reached the sound conclusion that while prohibition may be measurably enforced in small rural towns, it is ineffective elsewhere, does not materially lessen drunkenness, invites the operation of "speakeasies" and reduces very considerably the revenues of the municipalities. Those towns which have this year abandoned "no license," are mostly of considerable population, larger than the rural average. It is quite probable that from now on prohibition will continue to lose ground in Connecticut until eventually only the small rural towns will adopt it.

According to Congressman Parsons who is chairman of the New York County Republican committee, the defeat of the attempt to so amend the House rules as to lessen Speaker Cannon's power, was partly due to a deal between Tammany and prominent New York Up-State Republicans, under which the former delivered eight Democratic votes from New York to Cannon's aid, and the latter procured the rejection of certain registration bills at Albany to which Tammany was sharply opposed. Deals between Tammany and the New York Republican leaders have been matters of current report for many years, the alleged objects of them being the control of the great city by Tammany, and of the State by the Republican party. Evidently, Mr. Parsons who is managing the Republican Mayoral campaign in New York city and who apparently is not in sympathy with the "Up-State Republicans," knows of or suspects the existence of another deal between them and Tammany and hopes to defeat its purpose by revealing the facts of the alleged previous deal relative to the House rules. On the other side, there is an evident attempt to "choke him off" by threatening the appointment of a special House committee to investigate his charges, a procedure somewhat akin to that adopted in the case of the late Gov. Lister when he brought charges in connection with naval affairs, and with a similar intention on the part of Speaker Cannon who constructs such committees.

WANTS DIVORCE FROM WIFE LIVING IN RUSSIA

Husband Who Left Her in Odessa Claims She Refuses to Follow Him Here.

A divorce suit is now being tried in the Superior court at New Haven, the defendant to which lives near Odessa, Russia, and in which the massacre of Jews of 1905 in Russia plays a part. The case is that of Iman Kaminskaya against Rees Kaminskaya. Iman Kaminskaya some seven years ago left Russia for this country leaving his wife behind him. Since then, Kaminskaya, he had urged her at various times to come over here, but as she had failed to do so, he now brings suit for divorce on the grounds of desertion.

To show his good will to pay his wife's expenses in coming over here Kaminskaya deposited the sum of $50 with the court.

His wife, in Russia, contests the divorce, having engaged Judge Tyner and Attorney Kaplan as her representatives, and alleges that she had not been able to come as her husband had never sent her money enough to pay for her trip here.

Kaminskaya claims that his wife holds some property in Russia which belongs to him and that she does not wish to give it up and does not want to come to join him. This property, the ownership of which is in dispute between Kaminskaya and his brother in Russia, was transferred in the Jew massacre of 1905 and Mrs. Kaminskaya and her children were driven off the premises. Plaintiff is represented by Attorney J. P. Goodhart.

COY AND MURPHY FOR YALE COUNCIL

The members of the Yale senior class met in O'Brien hall last night and elected four members of the senior council. The men are S. Clement, of the Record board, and floor manager of the junior promenade committee; last winter; Captain Edward Coy, of the football team; Frederick Murphy, captain of last year's championship baseball team; and Carl Jewett, a member of the present News board.

Robert A. Taft, son of the President of the United States, was one of nine men from whom the four were elected. The others were Albert De Silver, William Duncan, Lyle Hall and Thomas Hewes.

The senior council meets at stated periods during the college year to decide questions of moment to the class, and often matters of importance to the whole student life of the university. The council are the ones that bring prestige to the men elected. All of the nine candidates are prominent men in the class.

At the meeting the meeting of the senior class, the other three members who constitute the council will be made known.

SHE WAS PLEASANTLY SURPRISED.

Miss H. E. Bell, Wausau, Wis., writes: "Before I commenced to take Foley's Kidney Pills I had severe pains in my back, could not sleep, and was greatly troubled with headache. The first few doses of Foley's Kidney Pills gave me relief, and two bottles cured me. The quick results surprised me, and I can honestly recommend them." F. B. Brill, local agent.

COST WAS $25,000,000

President Mellen Says He Has Spent This on New Economies of New Haven Road.

In connection with the New Haven road's new stock issue of $40,000,000, a Boston figure sharp says that the new share capital of the road will be $160,000,000. The annual dividend requirements will then be, at 8 per cent., $12,800,000. He concludes:

"We asked President Mellen what it had cost in capital expenditure to put the road in shape to yield his quoted striking operating economies, and he replied that probably, roughly speaking, $25,000,000 of it, money would represent this cost."

NO BLAME FOR TUNNEL BREAK

Coroner Mix Finds No Criminal Responsibility in Case of Four Deaths.

New Haven, Oct. 6.—Coroner Mix in his verdict filed in connection with the cave-in which caused the death of four men at Maltby lake tunnel week ago yesterday afternoon concludes that the deaths were not due to any criminal act or carelessness on the part of any person or persons. The verdict is based on the individual case of George Worden, but covers the field of the entire case, all the other deaths being similar and the same reasons which made the basis of the investigation. The coroner states that while he is of the opinion that the contractors took all precautions which seemed necessary to them the continued appearance of sand and water in this section of the tunnel where the accident occurred indicated something was wrong and that if the contractors had stopped all work in heading three, until the section before it was found to be beyond question safe the death of the four men would have been prevented.
